Regarding: Walmart – Northwest Region

Dear Bill:

In pursuit of providing the highest level of service to our national and regional clients we are always challenged with ferreting out qualified and professional subcontractors in every location we enter. In doing so, we make the effort to engage in relationships with those business partners that are both mutually beneficial and enduring.

For a business organization to gain respect of clients and throughout the industry is a simple concept, yet a much more complex accomplishment that involves the elements of honesty, integrity, loyalty and being forthcoming with all aspects of getting a project done on time as scheduled and within budget. Bill Smiley and Danny Grimes have been nothing short of accomplishing this for Jackson Dean Construction.

JBI and Jackson Dean completed two Walmart projects in Washington State this year, one of which was on an expedited schedule. They both had their sets of challenges and both Bill and Danny did an excellent job of running their crews and always finding a way to meet our demands and ultimately the schedule. I want to personally thank you for the hard work of your entire team provided, as well as, the professionalism your firm provided in completing these projects.

We are currently looking at future opportunities with our clients here in the Northwest and look forward to continuing our partnership as opportunities allow.

Respectfully,

Subject: JBI Electric

My name is Paul Jenkins and I work for a southeast Idaho general contractor. I am a project/construction manager of 25 years and recently had the opportunity to work with JBI Electric Systems. JBI was our electrical contractor on a large commercial retail center in Monroe Washington. The project allowed me the opportunity to work with JBI and specifically Bill Smiley as the JBI project manager.

Working with JBI has proven to be a positive experience overall. They are professional and provided a good service to the project. Their crews were knowledgeable and experienced and provided for a quality installation. They were cognizant and compliant in the safety requirements. The schedule on the project was a challenge and JBI was on time with their installations and supported the project time constraints.

I recommend JBI Electrical systems as a quality contractor and equally important given the choice would work with them again.
